Music of Christmas

Lesson for December 19, 1954

NO OTHER festival of the year is so full of music and of song as the festival of Christmas. Like all good and beautiful things, this too can be made a weariness to heart and mind. When we have to listen to some "popular" Christmas song, hampered out by some songsmith on Broadway who knows more about rhythm than religion, over the radio for six weeks on end; or when a loudspeaker on the courthouse square with its tireless Dr. Foreman electronic throat keeps battering the ears of Christmas shoppers with "Silent Night," we wish the night were silent. We almost wish the angels had not set such an example.

Music of Praise

But it was not this nor any of this that the angels meant when they sang their Gloria. The right music of Christmas is the music of praise, of glory to God. It is not a thing to fill up time on a disc-jockey's program, not something to be produced by a machine. It is music of praise, for the heart, from the heart. On a lonely road in the countryside there is a tiny lighted church. On a noisy boulevard in a distant, grimy city there is a great church, its rose-windows gleaming. In both of these there is singing tonight. To the passerby in mud or on the pavement, it may seem that these people sing alone. The frozen world around the country church makes no sign; there is no echo of the Hallelujah chorus in the great sanctuary. Nature and man seem out of tune with the Christmas music. But to the listening ear, the hearing heart, come many other voices.

Music of Creation

The poet-prophet of the 148th Psalm—one might almost think he had written these lines for a Christmas hymn—heard these voices. Like a descant which above the music of a hymn weaves a new beauty, so these other voices, which only a poet's ear can hear, add to the chorus of glory to God. With him we hear all God's angels, we hear the stars of light. This tiny planet carries many voices, but God's creation is vast. In realms of bliss pure spirits unsullied by sin sing their "Glory to God"; and throughout our universe, where some can perceive only the frightening spaces between the stars, where others can see only sightless flames endlessly whirling, the poet hears the morning stars singing together,—praising God by being what they are, witnessing to the majesty of his creation. And on this little planet too are songs unheard by man: "fruitful trees and all cedars; beasts and all cattle..." Where Christ has come, truly come, and men have not cast him out, all living things have reason to praise God.

Music for All Men

The music of Christmas is for all. It is for "kings of the earth"—the men of power and place. Wherever there is a land that can be called Christian, it is known that there is one King of kings, one Lord of lords. When Queen Elizabeth was crowned, it was by the Church of Christ and in the name of Christ. When President Eisenhower was inaugurated, his first public act was a personal prayer. There are no human beings too highly placed to need God; none so busy and important they have no time to praise him. "Old men and children" too are summoned to join the chorus. Old men, sitting by the fire or in the sun, old men done with life; children playing in the sun or by the fire, children who do not yet know what life means; old men and children, who have to be cared for, who make no decisions for other people—the small and the insignificant, all those on the outer fringes of life, let these too join in praise. For God came down that first Christmas night not in silence but to the music of a great singing. And when God broke the news for which man long had waited, the news men are still slow to hear, slow to believe, the news of Immanuel, the news that God is with us—this did not come as a whisper in the void. It came on the wings of a mighty song, borne by the voice of stars and angels—made known first not to the kings of the earth but to humble shepherds of whom none but God had ever heard.

"Farm of the Week" - Last Week

—This Series Sponsored by Jinney-Jungle, Grenada.

I did not have to ask anyone whose picture that was last week, but Scott Davis, Negro tenant who lives in the smaller of the two houses and who has lived with the Whitakers sixty five years failed to recognize it and was given a paper Friday and told to take it to his wife Mariah to see if she could recognize the picture.

The scene shown is the Whitaker place, about a couple of miles west of Oxberry, in Beat 5. The present place has 360 acres and was once part of a tract of about 800 acres, which belonged to the writer and his father.

Hard times hit us during the Hoover depression, as they hit everybody else. The Federal Land Bank and the Union Central Life Insurance Co. took it all except the place shown in the picture. They refused to pay taxes on that part, so it went to the State of Mississippi. One way or another, I drew maps for Cooley and accumulated $180, which I paid Hugh White and got the land back in my

I had spent the better part of my life, hungry myself, and trying to look after about 20 hungry Negro tenants, and finally got tired of the whole business. Mabel was younger and stronger than I was, so I decided her the property for "love and a dollar", and did not attempt to collect the dollar.

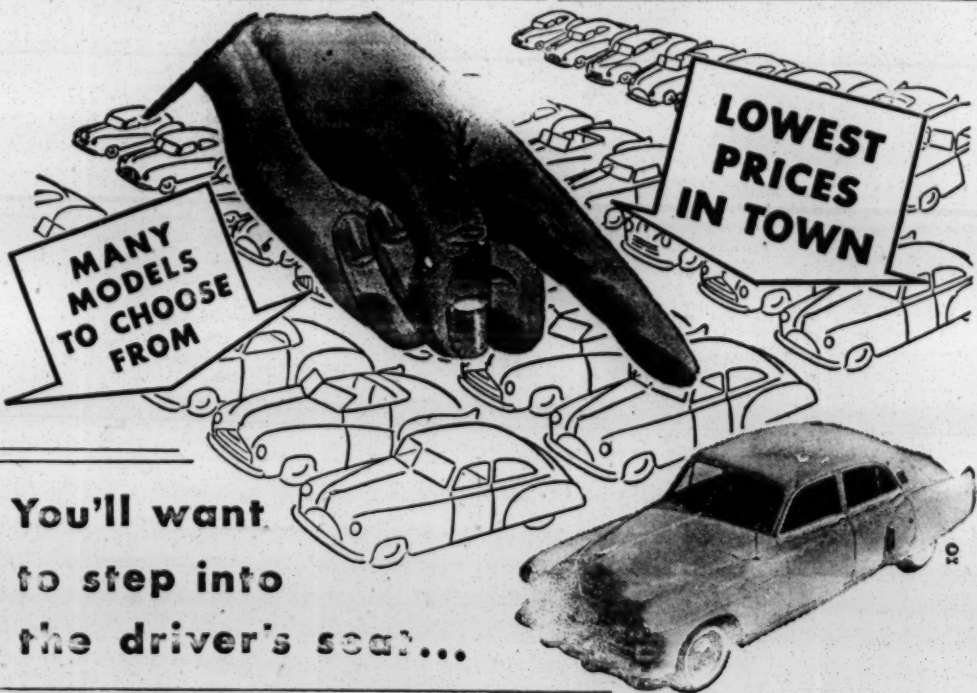

The property is her's. The nicely painted house is the same house City Lumber Company built for Mabel and me in 1919 and in this house three of our children were born. In the 1940s, the government acquired for an auxiliary air base this house and about 300 acres and was clearing it off. Mabel could not suffer to see the house where we had spent so long, and where most of the children were born, burned up or torn up, so she managed to dig up $50 to buy the house back from the government. She hired some men, and talked the government out of the big tractors and towed (just like one tows a sack of corn to the mill by a mule on a sled) the house to the spot shown in the picture and had it set-up again.

The house was towed about a mile. Whyte Jr., the farmer of the family, lives in the larger home which he and some Negro helpers repaired (for the first time since 1919) last year. He and his mama are in partnership in cattle and hogs and have about 30 head of cattle and an uncounted number of hogs.

Last year, on 20 acres allotted by the government, Whyte Jr., Scott Davis and Sing Holland produced about 20 bales of cotton and more corn than has been made on the place since the Indians had it.

Neither papa nor I ever thought much of this place but it is like many such places that apparently are worn out and thrown away. It is potentially a pretty valuable place. All it needs is a lotta hard work and fencing, some of which has been done by Whyte Jr.

Can't help but notice that Juch-ben who like Mabel and I have their children grow and gone, takes his wife out to dinners on Sundays, giving the poor woman a little rest, something that every woman ought to have sometimes.

Miss Modie, they say, is just living for Spring to come again so she can fish all the time. So is Mabel. Either may get physically tired, but never tired of fishing.

Down home at Oxberry Sunday afternoon, I noted where Whyte Jr. had put some substantial ceiling cover in his bedroom, making the room more comfortable and livable during this cold weather.

I am going to wait for Spring so that Lying Daves can spot some schools of bass in our lake. It used to be Lying Tommie, but Daves has taken over the title.

See where Dr. A. G. Hudson of Memphis has been by the office to pay his dues. If not that, somebody else came in to pay up. Anyway, his name is in the cash book.

Mabel and I have concluded that on neighbors, the Bristers, are fine folks.

The Biddy establishment really deserves a fine write-up. If we had room for it. It is really quite an establishment in which Biddy and his two boys operate, as well as a host of others. They operate on the principle that, if a man made it (whatever it is), Biddy can fix it. They have the essentials for the job, and those are the materials, the know-how and the tools.

On my agenda, if that's the right word, I have a write-up of Kirk, and a write-up of Biddy et al.

Talking about tools and know-how, those mechanics who came from the WNU in Memphis to install another press for us, had all of them. They came in her Friday morning, tore down our ancient press, sent it to Junkman Archie Hauffman, set-up the other press, adjusted it, and went back to Memphis Saturday afternoon. J. Fred and Andrew stood by to help out. I stood by at Tom Neely's place, did nothing. All I had to do, which I cheerfully did, was to get-off Saturday afternoon.

And, by the way, who is the latest prospective father around Grenada?

I was 65 in July this year and I call myself retired.

A Christmas Gift for our children

It does not appear on any shopping list. No child will write to Santa for it. The price tag is high; yet all can afford it.

Come Christmas morning, this gift cannot replace a hoped-for bicycle or doll. Yet our children will treasure it all their lives. For the greatest gift we can give them is a world better than the one we now live in. It is the gift that every parent wants for every child.

We cannot buy this better future with words or wishes. It is being built each day by the work we do, our behavior toward one another and our faith in God.

This is the one hundred and fifth Christmas the Illinois Central has shared with its friends and neighbors throughout Mid-America. We ask that our faith and our abilities be strengthened that we may participate with all of you in fashioning a finer future for those who follow us.
